THE RE-OPENED GRAVE. "Requiescus in pace-Amen." With quiet hands, and cheeks too fair.
And salptlier looks than earth's brides wear,
He brought her home—the birds of May
Sang sweet—was this their wedding day?
Was the the dear and loyful home
Where he through all the years might come?
Red, rest in punce, my love?

Men plant beside their thresholds dear Mute times, that ever year by year. Climb searer to the skies, and bring hweet pirds and breezes there to sing And soleach side the mournful door Which shut his bride in evermore. He planed a tree—he could no more. Best, rest in peace, my love!

For him the labor, care, and strife,
The restlessmen of human life,
Its joys, its pain to bear alone,
But not for grief to bear to mean,
Abiding changelessly his own—
While year by year those fair trees grew,
And elimbed up nearer to the blue.
Best, rest in peace, my love!

Men loved him for his kindly heart
Which brooded not in gluom spart,
As though that grave a shadow three
Over all his life-yet he was true.
And he ply from that still grave grave
Such blossoming wealth or generous deeds,
And sympathy with direct needs.
As only tool and that dear saint
Best, rest in peace, my love!

Rest, rest in peace, my love!

Open 1 a brideproom would pass o'er
To meet his bride foreverenore.
Twin trees he planted here that May,
Twins closer still your branches grey
G'er their still couch,—while every spray
Points up—date as their woulding day.
The lonely race is run, we have.

A Romance of the Sellian Struggle.

An interesting story is told of one of Garbaldi's volunteers. Two or three days befor the Dietator's departure from Palermo for Melazzo, he reviewed the corps of Major Sicoli, just arrived from Genoa. In the ranks he observed a small, pale and beardless boy, who had scarcely strength enough to raise his masket to his shoulder. Garibaldi ordered are with surprise, and a little of severity, or avance from the ranks. He in-quired his age, and the boy answered with a blush, "seventeen," although, in fact, he did not appear more than fourteen, and certainly was not the age he gave himself. The General complained to Major Sicoli that the Pied-montese Committee should send him such re-cruits, to which the Major replied that the Committee no doubt thought that the patriot ism of the volunteer was a compensation, for his want of age. "Oh, yes, that's it," said Garibaldi, with humor, "and the next thing is I shall be charged with the abduction of minors." The young volunteer stood trembling, with his eyes to the ground. "Your place is not here," said the Dictator roughly; "go back to school!" The volunteer blushed to his eyes, when Garibaldi added with more mildnest in his voice, "You see that your gun is too heavy for your small arms-give it to your neighbor, we have no arms to spare. Garibaldi gave the order that the young vol uld be sent back, with some others unteer she who were found in the same condition, by the next steamer; but when the moment departure arrived, the young volunteer was nowhere to be found. All that was known of him was that his Christian name was Quinto, and that he was the son of a lawyer in Milan. Nothing more was thought of him

On the 16th and 17th July two partial engagements took place between the troops of Col. Medici and the enemy near Barcellona. It was then that Medici sent to Palermo for Garibaldi, in anticipation of the battle which excursion the other day across Lake Michigan took place immediately after at Melazzo.—
